HOW TO EXTEND THE IRIS SEASON:

DWARF BEARDED IRISES, blooming period April-early May. Ask about varieties and prices.

MEDIAN IRISES (formerly intermediate bearded): Blooming period between dwarf iris and tall-bearded. Many rebloom in fall if they are kept actively growing through summer; to achieve this, feed plants with side dressing after bloom of spring and keep adequately watered during summer heat. Ask about varieties and prices.

SPURIA IRISES: Blooming after tall-bearded. Must have well drained location and prefer dry situation after blooming. Several varieties, colors white, yellows, blues, and yellow with bronze overlay, all $1.00 per rhizome.

KAE'MPFERI IRISES (Japanese): Blooming during late June. Because of sensitivity of these plants to limestone soils, they will be available only in paper pots. Several varieties and color patterns, prices 75¢ and 1.00, depending upon variety.

Bog Collection: Several species including the native I. versicolor; the water iris, Iris pseudacorus; and nearby several Louisiana hybrids, the most successful of which, at this location, is Dorothea K. Williamson. Prices for 3 mentioned here 50¢ each.

The first part of the report is a general description of the project. It includes the objectives, the scope, and the methodology. The objectives are to develop a system that can handle large amounts of data and to provide a user interface that is easy to use. The scope of the project is limited to the development of a prototype system. The methodology used is a combination of top-down and bottom-up approaches.

The second part of the report describes the system architecture. It includes a diagram of the system and a description of the components. The system is designed to be modular and extensible. It consists of a database, a user interface, and a set of application programs. The database is used to store the data and the user interface is used to interact with the user. The application programs are used to process the data and generate reports.

The third part of the report describes the implementation of the system. It includes a description of the hardware and software used. The hardware used is a personal computer with a hard disk and a mouse. The software used is a database management system and a programming language. The implementation of the system is described in terms of the development of the database, the user interface, and the application programs.

The fourth part of the report describes the results of the project. It includes a description of the system and a comparison of the results with the objectives. The system is able to handle large amounts of data and provides a user interface that is easy to use. The results of the project are compared with the objectives and it is found that the system meets the objectives.
